

MRS. WICKERSHAM FOR HUGHES

Says She Is Ashamed of Policy of U. S. Under Wilson Administration.

By MRS. GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM
(Wife of the Former U. S. Attorney General)

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—"I am tired of blushing for my country. Never did I think to hang my head as I have been forced to do during the last three years. I am a member of the Women's Committee of the National Hughes Alliance purely on the score of patriotism. Personally I am an anti-suffragist, but all my energies and interests are concentrated on the coming election.

"I long to be proud of my country, I need to be proud of it; proud of our spirit at home and proud of our reputation abroad; and I want to pass that pride on to my son and my grandsons. We must stand before the world as a nation composed in strength but absolutely ready at every point to back up its ideals when action is necessary. I think the real issue of this campaign is patriotism and that a great many of us of varying political convictions are going to work together for the welfare of the country. I am a firm believer in clearly defined political parties, but there are times and conditions in the political history of a country like ours when we must all unite on the big issues and agree to differ about the lesser.

An anti-suffragist I am not concerned with political organization as such, but, as a citizen of this country, I am deeply concerned for its welfare.

"Do I believe preparedness must be made an issue? Yes, indeed. And I want every man and woman in this country to be made to feel a sense of responsibility about serving it in some way. I want people to learn that preparedness cannot be settled entirely by Congress; that it is an individual matter and that we must take it up individually to make it national."

BRITISH WANT REASON FOR JOINING THE ARMY

Would Not Enlist at War's Start Without Satisfactory Explanation.

ARE LOYAL, THOUGH

96 Per Cent of Soldiers Are Recruited From Laboring Classes.

This story telling of the popular spirit in England, is the second in this series. Tomorrow, Henry Wood, United Press Staff Correspondent at Paris, will tell of the loyalty and patriotism of the French people.

POPULAR SPIRIT IN ENGLAND
By ED L. KEEN

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, Aug. 17.—Some Britons are born patriots, others achieve patriotism, and still others—Yes, the paraphrase holds good all the way through. Only those who have patriotism thrust upon them constitute a very small minority of the British public.

Conscription is no criterion. There were less than a million eligibles left to be conscripted. The majority of these would have volunteered if the reasons why their services were required had been freely, frankly stated. Lots of Britons have relatives in Missouri, some more skeptical than others. The military powers thought they couldn't take the British public into their confidence without enlightening the Germans. "Your King and country need you," they said. That sufficed for five million men; the others wanted details.

But this installment of war observations has to do principally with those who have achieved patriotism, and it revolves largely around a man named Ben Tillett—because he is a type.

The True British Subject.

Before the war Ben was a self-proclaimed international revolutionary socialist. For the period of the war he is neither international, revolutionary nor socialist. He is all Briton. What he will be after the war, Ben says is his own business. If he weren't over military age, Ben would be in the army. He is doing his bit by preaching patriotism to those who haven't acquired it in full measure.

Ben used to vie with Mrs. Pankhurst for the doubtful distinction of being Trouble-Maker-in-Chief of the British Empire. As head of the Dockers' Union and organizer of the powerful Transport Workers' Federation, he had successfully engineered some most disturbing strikes.

It was to the Tillets and Pankhursts of England and the Casements of Ireland, that Germany looked for substantial aid. But mostly her calculations went wrong. Social and industrial unrest in England didn't mean pro-Germanism or anti-Britishism when the Empire became involved in outside difficulties.

There were serious labor disputes in the early days—two of them, big, involving the Welsh coal-miners and the Clyde ship-workers. But in these there were other causes than lack of patriotism. The strikers felt that they had been unduly exploited. Their sole demand was that they be accorded a reasonable share of the war profits from their labor. In both the big strikes, the men won.

Germans Start Clyde Troubles.

This year's disturbance on the Clyde was different. It was obviously organized by men of pro-German sympathies and most Britishers believe, financed by Germans. The labor leaders had no part in it; they protested against it. The government sequestered the agitators and killed the strike.

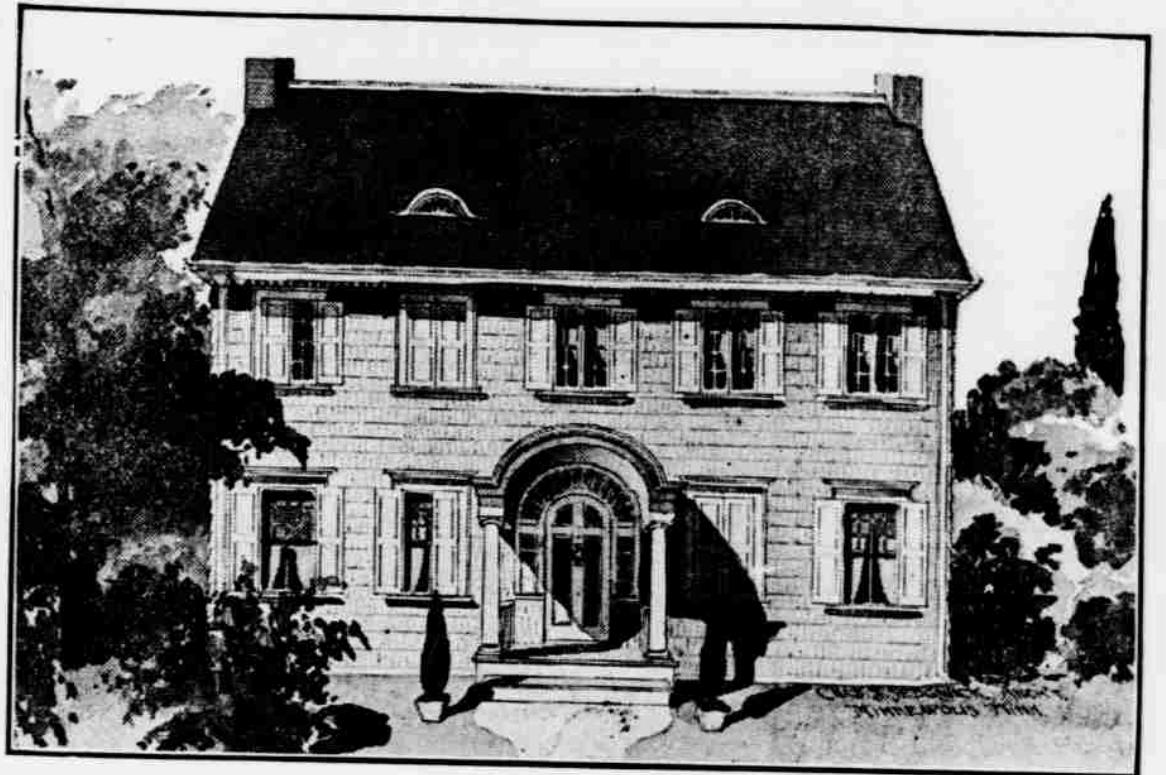

As to the attitude of British labor generally toward the war: No fewer than 4,800,000 of the five million volunteer soldiers were drawn from the working classes. But this is only a part of the story.

The Tillets of England, men who previously had put the rights of organized labor above everything else, have surrendered their most cherished principles. In the interest of the Empire the trade unions have forfeited for the period of the war practically all they had succeeded in establishing through desperate and bitter struggle. "Lotion of labor" or placing unskilled labor on a par with the skilled—both men and women. The bars of unionism have been let completely down in the name of patriotism. The Unions' agreement with the government provides:

Co-Operation Is Needed.

"Co-operative efforts to increase production by the adoption of ALL expedients which tend to increase and maintain output; interchangeability inside the trade of various classes who are members of the trade; suspension for the period of the war of all

PLANS OF AN ATTRACTIVE HOME

An Old Style Colonial House Costing $4,000. Designed by Charles S. Sedgwick.

The old style "Colonial" has a distinct charm of its own and many homes are building at the present time that take their inspiration from these old houses.

Our design is a very simple modest house, the size being 34 feet front and 25 feet depth. The regulation central entrance with hall and stairway and arrangement of rooms on each side is strictly "Colonial" and the exterior covered with alternate courses of wide and narrow shingles adds another attractive feature.

These wall shingles should be the best quality of heavy cedar or pine shingles and stained with a dip coat of creosote and a second coat given with the brush on completion. A very pleasing combination is a dark moss green for the wall shingles and a light grey stain for the roof shingles, then paint all of the outside trimmings white, including the outside of window sash, also blinds if used.

In this plan the living room is on the left side with a den at the rear, with book shelves and small high up windows, the two rooms are connected by a wide columned opening.

In the center of the outside of living room is a wide projected chimney with fireplace and on opposite side of house is a corresponding chimney and fireplace, these two chimneys are carried up on the outside in the center of the two end gables and built of a dark oriental brick.

The main central staircase is an attractive feature, with the landing in a curved semicircular end of hall with a pretty niche on each side. The kitchen and dining room arrangements are good. The first story is finished in dark oak and second story in pine and enameled white. The cost is $4,000 to $5,000, exclusive of heating and plumbing. A full basement and three good chambers complete a very pretty "Colonial" home.

Your "Don't Wants" Are Somebody's "Wants"

That carriage or go-cart that the youngest child has outgrown is just what another woman wants to give her child.

That rocking chair and the old dining room table are good even though you have relegated them to the attic.

You don't need a hose and garden tools in a flat, but there are others who have just moved from flats to houses—and they are ready right now to buy hose, tools, refrigerators, etc. Even the clothing you have threatened to sell for old rags will bring a better price if it isn't all worn out. Almost every one of your "don't wants" is sure to be somebody's "want." And a Missourian Want Ad is the way to find the somebody and the money. Just phone 55 and tell your "don't wants" to the Missourian.
